3. Title

The title of the paper should provide a concise statement of the contents of the paper. A good title is very important and will attract readers and facilitate retrieval by online searches, thereby helping to maximize citations. The title should include topical keywords and allude to the interesting conclusions of the paper. A title that emphasizes the main conclusions, or poses a question, has more impact than one that just describes the nature of the study.

Running title

A short 'running title', of not more than 55 characters (including spaces), for use as a headline

Words: Up to 20 Font: Times New Roman (Headings) Size: 15 Alignment: Center Title should be in Bold and in Title Case.

4. Authors and affiliations

➤ Author names should be given in upper- and lower-case, not in all capitals, to avoid ambiguities. The author for correspondence must be clearly indicated. It is permissible to include the names of more than one author as corresponding author, but a single author must act as the point of communication during the peer review process.

➤ The name and address of the laboratory or laboratories and university where the work was done, and present addresses of authors who have since moved.

Corresponding author details

Detailed Author's address, including telephone number (with international calling code), Fax number and email address for the corresponding author should be mentioned.

5. Abstract

8. Case Report

The case to be narrated in a way that is easy and enjoyable to follow. The general approach description of the history, examination findings, investigations and treatment in that order, without the headings. Avoid any unnecessary details, and only mention the important positive and negative findings from each part of the clinical assessment. The inclusion of one or two images to keep the reader engaged is an essential part of the case report.

9. Discussion

This should not recapitulate the results obtained from previous works, and should not be too long. Discussion must illustrate and interpret the report of the study. It may be helpful to list the main conclusions at the end. A combined Results and Discussion section is encouraged where appropriate.
